

41th Annual Bowl Bonanza

Hello and welcome back. Firstly, I want to welcome Mary into the "Cammarano" fold. You will not need your green card anymore. We also want to welcome Luigi and Sophia, Kate and Luigi's young people, and welcome Gemma's fiancé Maria. Welcome aboard, we're so glad to have you all and I'm happy your credit scores came in favorably.

I wanted to congratulate last year's BB winner...remember who? Well, it was none other than Kate with a whopping 47 points. That's almost as much as two combined entries, so we double checked. Congrats Kate. Too bad the money is long gone.

Speaking of long gone, our loser was Ashley. Ashley was in a statistical tie with hubby Nicholas, until the tiebreaker put her over the edge as the loser. That must have been a fun post BB dinner, and sorry Nicholas, I couldn't change your tiebreaker at halftime, but I can't blame you for trying. Baby needs a new pair of flip flops.

Moving on...next year there's a carnival of changes in CFB. The conference members are changing, leaving the Pac 10 out in the cold, and SMU here in Dallas is joining the "Atlantic Coast" Conference, 1000 miles from the Atlantic Coast. The transfer portal looks like a shady gambling service representing free agency, and the now approved "students pay for play" makes Washington DC look like a revival meeting. Oh well.

I wanted to personally congratulate Chris for another seamless web exercise, who continues to make the BB website design look like child's play. Thanks Chris! On a side note, with next year's imminent 12 team playoff, Chris is seeking funds to upgrade his supercomputer to include a tenth-generation cache, and a special AI chip.

*Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, and to all a good night!
BBA...KT*

